

Adela Jiménez Ph.D. Candidate
Collaborator.

Adela Jiménez-Prensa is a PhD student in the Complutense University of Madrid where she graduated in Psychology and also studied a Master's degree in General Health Psychology. She is also trained in psychological intervention in disasters and immediate psychological assistance by telematics means. Moreover, she has presented several verbal and written communications at different national conferences. Since the beginning of 2018 she has been part of the research team in the Complutense University of Madrid "Research and treatment in clinical and health psychology", within a line of research that explores psychological assistance to terrorism victims. Her current PhD focuses on Complicated Grief Disorder in this population and the different factors that may be interfering such as rumination and metacognition.

February 2019.

