CHINA HEALTH PSYCHOLOGY CONFERENCE

IAAP Division 8 members contribute to inaugural meeting.

The newly established Behavior and Health Division of the Chinese Psychological Society held its successful inaugural conference on 21 November 2021. The meeting included an online international panel of IAAP Division 8 speakers. Aleksandra Luszczynska (SWPS University of Social Sciences and Humanities) spoke about evidence for cultivating or enabling – two theory-based mechanisms for linking social support self-efficacy and health outcomes. Sonia Lippke (Jacobs University Bremen) presented on the promotion of behavioral and mental health of society, and Jenifer Inauen (University of Zürich) shared her work on self-regulation of eating in daily life. John de Wit (Utrecht University) presented on lessons learned from the sexual health domain for a multi-level perspective on health behavior.

CALL FOR PAPERS

Applied Psychology: International Review is planning a special issue entitled “How do entrepreneurs influence their social environment? New Psychological Perspectives”

Over the past decades, entrepreneurship research from a psychological perspective has gained prominence in the multidisciplinary field of entrepreneurial performance. An emerging topic that has received relatively limited attention is how entrepreneurs' characteristics, actions, and experiences can impact their stakeholders' well-being and functioning, which we believe is a rich and intriguing field of investigation. With this special issue, we encourage scholars to investigate the interactions between entrepreneurs and their social environment from a multilevel and temporal perspective, such as cross-level interactions that shed light on contingencies and boundary conditions of certain relationships, or to research paths that may have differential effects in the short or the long term.

Manuscripts can be submitted online in the period July - September 30, 2022. Please direct any questions regarding the Special Issue to the guest editors: Dr Marjan Gorgievski, Dr. Antje Schmitt, Dr Silvia Costa and Dr. Safal Batra (apir.entrepreneur@gmail.com).
