Dear IAAP members,

The world has been through the COVID-19 pandemic, and we have all been impacted in one way or another. The uncertainties and challenges faced by healthcare professionals have been significant, especially during the early months of the pandemic when information was rapidly changing.

As of [insert date], there have been [insert number] confirmed cases of COVID-19 globally, with [insert number] deaths reported. These figures are subject to change daily as the situation evolves.

The International Association of Applied Psychophysiology and Biofeedback (IAAP) has been closely monitoring the pandemic and its impact on healthcare professionals. We have continued to provide updates and resources to support our members as they continue their work in challenging circumstances.

In this edition of our newsletter, we want to highlight some of the key issues that have emerged since our last newsletter in December 2019. We hope these updates provide valuable insights and resources to help our members navigate the ongoing crisis.

[Additional content regarding professional practice issues and updates from the IAAP Division of Professional Practice can be included here.]

[Resources and links to further information can be provided here.]

We encourage all IAAP members to continue to share their experiences and ideas. Your contributions are valuable and help inform our work as we support each other during these unprecedented times.

Best regards,
[IAAP President's Name]
IAAP Division of Professional Practice